When the homeowner is using a paint supplier, other than specified from list, or is unsure of the color of their house, it is required that the homeowner take a paint chip from their house and match the color. Homeowners are solely responsible for color mistakes. Homeowners are also responsible for all expenses to bring their home into compliance regarding color. If a homeowner is painting their house a different color from the current color of the house, it is the responsibility of the homeowner to match the color from the approved list to their contractors supplier. Homeowners will be responsible for all color inaccuracies. It is recommended to check the color twice before applying paint to the house.
